Sergey Kozlovskiy Wet Plate Collodion

2024-10-04 - 2024-12-31

Sergey Kozlovskiy was born into the lineage of the Manizer dynasty, a family of hereditary sculptor-artists. He is a professional photographer since 2005, a participant in different international photographic projects and exhibitions. Over the last three years, he has dedicated himself to the technique of ambrotype.

AMBROTYPE, from the Greek 'immortal impression', or WET PLATE COLLODION photography, is an early photographic process invented and described by Frederick Archer in 1851.

In his creations, Sergey merges present-day reality with the ancient technology of the turn of the century. By shooting on glass plates, he ensures each photograph is a unique artifact that defies duplication or alteration. It represents the epitome of analog photography in our digital age.

Visitors to the ORATIO virtual exhibition have the exclusive opportunity to print and own limited edition reproductions of the author's series, including 'Decadence', 'The Unrevealed' and 'Angels. Montenegro', among others.

Currently residing in Montenegro, Sergey also creates unique silver portraits on glass for the guests of his studio.
